NATASHA'S STORY

Natasha's original goal was to earn an undergraduate degree and start teaching. What she learned along the way is the power of convenience. Now that she has almost attained that goal, she's looking ahead to graduate school—at Brenau, of course.

"When I started, my first three classes were online. And, until my senior year, I always had one class online and one class on campus for each eight-week session. There were even times when I was able to take two classes online at the same time. Online classes give me the flexibility to travel and not miss any events in my children's lives."

KRISTY'S STORY

When Kristy's family situation changed, it was time for a career change, too. A former dance instructor, she knew she liked teaching. But she wanted an academic environment and a flexible schedule. Brenau offered the flexibility and learning community she was looking for.

"Unlike my undergraduate experience, where many students were unsure about what they wanted to do, my peers at Brenau are very focused. Most of us are 'career-switchers,' and everyone brings to class knowledge that only comes from experience. We strengthen and support one another."
